Meet the Attorneys

Eric Buckvar

A graduate of the State University at Albany in 1983 and Brooklyn Law School in 1987, Eric practiced as prosecutor for murder and serious felony cases as a Kings County District Attorney from 1987 – 1994. He tried numerous homicide and other serious felony cases, and also handled many appeals of homicides and other serious felony cases before the Appellate Division, Second Department. In 1994, he decided to join his father Morton and form the firm Buckvar & Buckvar.

Since then, he's successfully helped clients in a variety of personal injury cases,

- $1.2 million-dollar suit regarding the wrongful death of a New York State inmate
- $2.5 million total in settlements for wrongful deaths related to the negligent highway design of the Bronx River Parkway

Eric currently stays active at the New York State Trial Lawyers Association and the Jewish Lawyers Guild.

Morton Buckvar

Morton Buckvar graduated New York University Law School in 1959, where he had been a member of the Law Review under legendary legal writer, and judge, Irving Younger.

In 1960, he opened his own firm at 299 Broadway in Manhattan. Morton Buckvar handled and tried thousands of cases of all types, including personal injury, commercial, and criminal cases. He won a 1980 trial on behalf of "The Incredible Hulk" actor and bodybuilder, Lou Ferrigno, against promoter Dan Lurie.

It's not every day in the legal industry that you get to represent someone with a high degree of notoriety. But, that's exactly what happened to me, Morton Buckvar. Lou Ferrigno, television's Incredible Hulk, filed a lawsuit against Dan Lurie, who at the time published Muscle Training Illustrated magazine.

Lurie used photos of my client, which implied that he endorsed various protein-supplements advertised in the magazine, when in fact, he did not. Photos of Ferrigno also appeared on the cover of the magazine.
